HEADLINE: AICP Announces its 2006 Lennon Award Recipient

BODY:

The Association for Insurance Compliance Professionals (AICP) is pleased to announce Tom Tomlinson as the 2006 Lennon Award recipient.

The Lennon Award is AICP's most prestigious award; which is named after one of the founding fathers who was not only instrumental in the initial development but also contributed years of service to the organization. This award is reserved for members who have continuously demonstrated commitment to the Association over time and have made significant contributions to the shaping of the AICP. This year the Lennon Award was presented to Tom Tomlinson in recognition of his dedication, fortitude and outstanding service to the AICP as member and continuous volunteer. He is a member of the publications group, education group (even prior to the formation of the committee). Tom helped create and publish the State Filers Handbook, authored the Ratemaking Guide in 1995 and the rewrite in 2001 and in his spare time also Co-Chaired this committee.

On the National level, Tom has served as a regional director, VP, President and now is one of our extraordinary past presidents. Not only has Tom served at the National level but also at his local chapter level as the Chapter Vice President and President. This year alone he served on the Government and Industry relations committee, assisted in the review of the sponsorship packages and various other items.

In Tom's spare time, his volunteer activities extend far beyond. He has an impact on every community – whether that community is a church, civic association or profession. The spirit of volunteerism is certainly alive and well in the heart and mind of Tom Tomlinson.

With this, the AICP would like to again thank Tom for his continued spirit and congratulate him as the recipient of this year's Lennon Award.
